And today's financial tip:

If I am not pleased with the company's performance can I make a resolution at the AGM to remove the Board of Directors or Management of the company?

If the general membership, a group of members, or a single shareholder, is displeased with the company's performance they can vote against reappointment of the board of directors or place a motion for the removal of the existing board and the installation of a new board. For this motion to be successful, it must be seconded and receive a majority vote.
