And today's financial tip:

Do companies give shareholders advance notice of the date for the Annual General Meeting?

Yes, companies give shareholders advance notice of the Annual General Meeting (known as an AGM). In most OECS territories the Companies Act requires that companies give shareholders a minimum of seven days notice of an Annual General Meeting, however the common business practice is twenty-one days notice. Some companies' by-laws also state the number of days required for notifying shareholders of an AGM.
